

Subject: New International MSc programme on UNESCO Biosphere Reserves

Dear colleagues,

we are proud to present to you the announcement of enrolment for the first year of a new International Academic Master Programme on UNESCO Biosphere Reserves, at Eberswalde University of Germany. It will launch in winter term 2020/2021. Applications are possible from July 1, 2020.

Please share this email with your MAB National Committee, Biosphere Reserve Managers and all other relevant audiences.

To our knowledge, this is the first international Master Programme in English language (a French language Master is offered by Toulouse University). Eberswalde University has decades of experience working in and with the UNESCO MAB programme. They have also just launched an international doctoral studies programme on MAB.

The new Master Programme „Biosphere Reserves Management“ focuses on UNESCO's World Network of Biosphere Reserves and its great potential for sustainability transformation.

The University will present this and other study programmes during their online University Information Days 2020 (<https://hit.hnee.de/english-international/>). There will be a special session on the “Biosphere Reserves Management” Programme next Friday (June 26th) at 10:00 a.m.

With the study course, Eberswalde University wants to educate future Biosphere Reserve managers and actors. For this reason, they promote intercultural exchange, integrate approaches from the natural and social sciences, and work together with practitioners from UNESCO Biosphere Reserves from around the world.

Please check their pages <https://www.hnee.de/de/Forschung/Biosphere-Reserves-Institute/M.Sc.-Biosphere-Reserves-Management/M.Sc.-Biosphere-Reserves-Management-K6999.htm>, or join the session next Friday.

Best regards

Lutz
